shone with delight. He thanked each delegate for his support. There was no protest or reluctance. No sign of the earnest martyr spirit. The game had been played carefully to the end, and there was no longer a reason for hypocrisy. Mr. Hanna smiled calmly on the pleasant scene.

Audience Still Cold.
There was a hush when Chairman Lodge advanced to the front of the stage and announced that nominations for President of the United States were in order.

The reading clerk began to call the roll of States.
"Alabama," he cried.

"Alabama yields to Ohio," came the quick answer.

Senator Foraker ascended to the platform. The audience applauded him, but not very vigorously. Senator Foraker began his speech nominating Mr. McKinley.

His speech was a part of the perfunctory, machine-like, commercial movement which had failed to arouse the enthusiasm of the party. The Senator spoke slowly and skillfully toward the last sentence of his speech, which ended with the name of President McKinley.

The great moment had come—the moment for which all national conventions wait. One-half of the people in the hall arose, but the applause was weak and uncertain. The result of the nominating speech was a surprise.

There was no sudden shock in sound, no uplifting, fierce roar. The delegates and spectators waved their hands and their handkerchiefs, and there was a low, steady cry of approval and cheer. The applause became general, but perfunctory. The standards were grouped over his head, and the Republican party proclaimed Mr. McKinley.

The sound of applause grew louder, but the demonstration was still a ghastly failure. Something was wrong. Part of the audience laughed at the desperate effort of Mr. Hanna to make a convulsion.

Then some one ran upon the stage and handed Mr. Hanna a pole surmounted by a tripod, a pair of plums.

The master of the Republican party stood alone on the edge of the stage and swung the plume over his head in slow circles. He waved his hand, then, when he grew tired waving the plume back and forward to and from the audience.

The red and black standards of the States and Territories were picked from the floor and carried up the aisles toward the front of the hall.

The band crashed, and the drums rolled. The procession of standards ascended the platform. Mr. Hanna jumped on a chair. The standards were grouped over his head, and the Republican party proclaimed Mr. Hanna as the power behind the President.

It was a machine triumph, and it was not indorsed by the 16,000 American citizens who crowded the hall. The officers of the Republican party proclaimed Mr. Hanna as the power behind the President.

The nomination of Mr. McKinley to-day was the greatest failure from the standpoint of party enthusiasm that is known in the history of the party.

The crowd remained in its seats and kept up a machine-like, perfunctory sort of applause for nearly twenty minutes.

The Governor made a true Rough Rider speech, but the only time he really touched the heart of the Democrats.

"They have raved, they have foamed at the mouth in denunciation of trusts; and now, in my own State, their foremost leader, including the man before whom others bow with bared head and trembling knee, have been discovered in a trust which is of infamous and perhaps of criminal character."

not discriminate. It might perhaps seem the coming of Li Hung Chang as inimical to his designs, and his life would necessarily be in danger.

This is a significant coming from the Chinese Minister. Mr. Wu, however, disclaims that he has any doubts of Peking. In addition to the orders already sent to the army and navy, Admiral Remy was instructed to-day to send all the marines possible at once.

The dependence of the United States appears to be now in the comparatively small number of marines that can assist in the relief of Tien-Tsin, where a large American army should be employed.

A telegram received by the Navy Department to-day from Admiral Remy at Manila said that the Zafra sailed yesterday from Cavite for Hong-Kong. She is a supply ship, and may proceed to the relief of Tien-Tsin, as well as a cargo of food and other necessities.

The Zafra has 150 extra marines aboard, which may be used to fill out the complement of the fleet. The Zafra is a supply ship, and may proceed to the relief of Tien-Tsin, as well as a cargo of food and other necessities.

"SITUATION IMPROVING."
Paris, June 21.—The Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Delcasse, replying in the Chamber of Deputies to-day to a request for the latest news from China and the policy of the French Government in the future, said that he had received a dispatch dated June 21, saying that the legations and foreigners at Peking were safe and sound on June 21.

He added that a dispatch had just arrived from Peking, the French Consul at Yunnan, dated June 21, saying that the Chinese authorities were at last realizing their responsibilities and that he probably would be able to leave. This dispatch ends the long period of uncertainty.

"A material improvement in the situation exists," M. Delcasse added.

He said that he had in China some wooden vessels, but as our fleet is the best in the world, our diplomacy in China, I made an effort to have them replaced by modern warships. The end of the month of May 60 men left France to reinforce our troops in Chinese waters. Before the relations of M. Pichon the French Minister of Marine, he had ordered the cruiser Minotaur to be sent to Peking.
